Because Of New Dorm
Coed Admissions To Rise

The construction of new dormitory facilities for coeds may lead to a rise in coed admissions, according to Roland R. Geyer, Director of Admissions.

"The purpose of the new dorms is to provide sufficient housing space for freshmen women," said Geyer. "This year, however, the two dormitories are not quite large enough for all of those who will be admitted."

There is no intention to relax our present coed admission standards, even though the availability of additional dormitory space in the new dorms the Institute is emphasizing the fact that MIT is not exclusively male.

"Any woman who applies to MIT, Geyer said, "we don't discourage them from applying."

ROTC To Have Scholarships, Fewer Hours, No Campus Drill

(Continued from Page 1)

An examination will then be administered to the students.

HOURS REDUCED

The program on campus will consist of two years of courses and two years of ROTC program, now in existence, but without drill. The academic program will be cut to five hours a week, with the other five hours allocated to ROTC, administration, and study. The program will require students to join one of the new military branches or the Marine Corps, and will be based on a three-year ROTC program. Students who join the program will receive credit for half of the time spent in ROTC. However, students who do not join the program will receive credit for the full time spent in ROTC.

PROGRAM EXPANDED

The program will also include a new section on the ROTC program, which will be held in the evenings. Students who wish to participate in the ROTC program will be required to join the program, and will be given credit for the time spent in ROTC. The program will also include a section on the ROTC program, which will be held in the evenings. Students who wish to participate in the ROTC program will be required to join the program, and will be given credit for the time spent in ROTC.

FINANCE

The price for the program will be $372 and $176 respectively, and will be paid by the Institute. The program will be administered by the Institute, and will be offered to all students who have not previously participated in the program. Students who have already participated in the program will be offered a reduced price of $176.

Good Chance To Pass

The Bill has a good chance of passing in Congress this session, Colonel Linley, believes, and the Army, the Air Force, and the Navy, in particular, will be given, by the President, the opportunity to pass the program. Any remaining vacancies in the quota for each division will be filled by interested students who have not previously been rejected.

The Army and Air Force ROTC programs will be a part of the program, Col. Irving W. Linley, head of the Army ROTC department, has said. "As soon as the plan is passed, I will ask for the students to be able to enter the program. The plan has some difficulty, and I believe it is the best way to do it," he said. The program will be administered by the Institute, and will be offered to all students who have not previously participated in the program. Students who have already participated in the program will be offered a reduced price of $176.

IMPROVEMENTS

Improvement of student-faculty-communication, according to Jack D. Alexander, head of the student-faculty-communication committee, is one of the major improvements in the program. Other improvements include a comprehensive tutoring system, a program of student-faculty course committees, and improve them. Among such programs as the Entrepreneurs Program, a comprehensive tutoring system, a program of student-faculty course committees, and improve them. Among such programs as the Entrepreneurs Program, a comprehensive tutoring system, a program of student-faculty course committees, and improve them. Among such programs as the Entrepreneurs Program, a comprehensive tutoring system, a program of student-faculty course committees, and improve them. Among such programs as the Entrepreneurs Program, a comprehensive tutoring system, a program of student-faculty course committees, and improve them.