UAP Candidates Statements

Mark E. Barron

Do you expect the UAP to do anything differently in the future than it has in the past? I feel that UAP is a catalyst which could be exploited by student government attention.

(1) Above all, to work toward the three objectives initially specified in the academic framework, the absence of which would deprive MIT of its most valuable asset — its educational process.

(2) To develop the new potential programs, as specific individual activities and in specified interest in student activities and increased bi-lateral information exchanges.

Staff To Interview UAP Candidates

The five UAP candidates will be asked about their suggestions and opinions on student government issues at a press conference tomorrow at 9:00 a.m. in the Library Lobby.

The conference, presented by the UAP Campus Committee of the MIT community free of charge. The panel of questions will include members of the staff of The Tech.

Winter Weekend: They Listened, Laughed, Loved ... And Left

"College World" reports on a week that limited open bar, hours from 9 p.m. to 1 a.m. on Fridays and Saturdays has been granted to graduating seniors at MIT. A managing editor here said that the gesture was aimed at promoting the environment of "student life" for undergraduates. An associated situation has been an increase in the number of "student reports" to the Dean of Students.

Evictions Pending At Barnard's Altora; Men Soon Excluded

Students at Michigan State University may soon be living in a entirely new type of dormitory—a classroom dormitory. Three a year, the dormitory walls, and the usual dormitory activities, will be transformed into an activity center. The facilities will include a library, a lounge, and an additional meeting room. The students will be responsible for the maintenance of the dormitory, and they will be able to use the facilities on a first-come-first-served basis. The dormitory will also feature a computer lab, a recreation room, and a study area.

Not Taken In Degree

One year, a degree program at the University of Illinois library students have put into practice the second corner of the academic framework. The students have been involved in a project to identify and catalog the bird migration patterns. The project involves attaching transmitters to the birds, which are then tracked as they migrate. The data collected will help to understand the migratory patterns and habits of various species of birds. The project has been successful in providing valuable information to researchers and conservationists. The data collected will be used in future studies to develop conservation strategies and protect endangered species.
