BSO season includes 8 open rehearsals; Leinsdorf conducts

The Boston Symphony Orchestra will present a series of eight Open Rehearsals this season. Erich Leinsdorf, Music Director, will conduct the majority of the Open Rehearsals. Pierre Monteaux, Charles Munch and thirteen soloists will be heard. Originally in 1956 primarily for students in the Boston area, the Open Rehearsals are a preview of the Orchestra's weekend concerts. They provide a unique opportunity to see and hear the Orchestra, conductors, and soloists as they perfect their programs.

Season tickets are now available for the eight Open Rehearsals at the Symphony Hall Box Office at $15, a saving of 25 percent over the single sale price of $20. Last season the series was sold out by subscription.

The first program will be given October 10, with programs November 14, December 19, January 15, February 5, and March 19, and April 16. All begin at 7:30.
