New 'Social Beaver' to have expanded format

Tentative plans have been made to expand the forthcoming issue of the Social Beaver to cover the entire undergraduate body. The Social Beaver, in past years, has been distributed only to incoming freshmen to acquaint them with the Boston area.

"The main problem," says John Davis, editor of the 1969 issue, "is in financing the expansion." The exact cost has not been calculated, but, hopefully, said Davis, the additional cost will be satisfied by an increase in the number of advertisers in the advertising rate.

The editorial board will consist of representatives from the existing student activities.

'ignorance and lethargy' in Louisiana

Tentative plans have been described in the catalogue that would be in the antique department - Tulane's "Catalogue of Academic Department of 1844-38." Excerpts from the catalogue show that "Tulane University...will, it is hoped, prove a potent agency in redeeming Louisiana from its present condition of ignorance and lethargy."

In 1844, the "fee for admission to any part of the University, except the medical department, will be $30 per annum."

"Tulane University of Louisiana is divided into Tulane University, Tulane College and Tulane High School, the Law Department, and the Medical Department."

"For admission to the Preparatory Circular, High School pupils must be twelve years of age, of good moral character, and must be proficient in Reading, Writing, School Geography and Arithmetic to percentage."

"Notwithstanding the occasional outbreaks of yellow fever, New Orleans is, perhaps, the healthiest city of its size in the United States," the potential student was assured. "Epidemics visit it only at intervals of years, and prevail only in the summer vacation."

The catalogue had its views on education, too. "The hand, the eye and the muscles are trained both by gymnastic exercises under a teacher, and by that labor indispensable in all work."
