At the IFC meeting on November 20, representatives of undergraduate interfraternity councils, together with college deans and student advisors and presidents, elected 30 leaders representing 30 chapters in 20 institutions to serve on the student advisory committee to represent the MIT Interfraternity Council.

The theme of the conference will be based on the ideals of college fraternities in terms of their public image, principles, how to adjust to the trends in higher education, their accommodation to the economies of good business management, their leadership capacity and how it can be developed, and how to maintain the highest standards in scholarship and conduct of the member students.

Justice Tom C. Clark of the U.S. Supreme Court and former U.S. Attorney-General in the Truman Administration, will deliver the keynote address at the principal banquet on December 6. Justice Clark, a graduate of the University of Texas, is vice-president of Delta Tau Delta fraternity.

Dr. Irving L. Dillard, professor of journalism at Princeton University and editor of the New York Post-Dispatch, will address the opening session of the conference. Dr. Dillard, a graduate of the University of Missouri, and currently a member of the editorial board of the New York Post, is a past president of Delta Kappa Lambda as well as Sigma Delta Chi, the professional journalism fraternity.

The concluding session of the conference will be addressed by Dr. Seth R. Brooks, minister of the Bahamas, the head of the Missionary Church of Washington, D.C., and president of Beta Theta Pi fraternity.

Concurrent meetings will be held by the National Conference of Undergraduate Interfraternity Councils, the Fraternity Secretaries Association and the College Fraternity Association.

This summer the Foreign Opportunities Committee will conduct a program open to those who will be in the United States next year. FOC wants to find out what sort of program students could participate in the next year. The FOC hopes to see five MIT students abroad next year.
