Bennett Cerf coming to Kresge

Bennett Cerf will speak January 9 at Kresge Auditorium, Walter Whitman's talk on "Show Business Is No Business," formerly scheduled for that day, will be April 22.

Cerf, the president of Random House, one of the largest publishing houses in the business, graduated from Columbia University in 1919. He started Random House in 1925.

He also writes a daily syndicated column, "Try and Stop Me," and is a regular panelist on "What's My Line?"

Tickets are free and will be available in Building 10 the Wednesday before the lecture.

MIT studies loan policy

"We are still after money for a chemistry building."

Neither of the officials thought any controversy would arise from the increased government aid to education. Snyder saw "no implication of government interest" possible in the event of an outright grant.

NEA's loans increased

On the same day that the $1.7 billion aid to education bill was passed, the Senate reached final agreement on a $1.5 billion measure providing grants to the states for vocational education and a large increase in National Defense Education Act loan funds. The previous ceiling of $200 thousand and per institution was raised to $500 thousand.

Present Institute policy does not authorize NEA loans to students. The assumption was that "Our own funds would handle our needs and be better financial arrangements for students," explained Jack H. Frazey, Director of Student Aid.

He added that MIT is "now in the process of looking hard at this policy," especially in light of increased demands upon the Technology Loan Fund.

Harvard University requests for NEA loans this year totaled nearly $1 million, but were cut to the $250 thousand maximum allowable in the under present legislation.

According to the Harvard Crimson, a new request for the full $200 thousand is almost certainly forthcoming for the Technology Loan Fund.

NEA also sees its loans as a "comprehensive and distinctive selection of undergraduates, in looking, suits and Sportwear...
