Lacrosse team finishes trip at 1-3

by Neil Gilman

While the MIT students were basking in the warm sun, swimming in the cool water and of course, hitting the books, the Tech lacrosse team suffered through their vacation down South on a dusty, hot, 100 yard field. On the last day of the trip, the team finally gained one victory, after losing to three overpowering teams. In a four day span beginning Tuesday, April 1, the lacrosse team lost to Maryland, one of the top lacrosse schools in the nation. Captain Bill Drees '64, however, managed to score two goals while Wayne Matson '64 scored one. Ron Mandel '65 was credited with an assist. When MIT faced Loyola the following day, but they were playing against an all-America goalie, Munson and Matson each scored one unanswered goal. After the game, Munson discovered he had an infected ankle and was prevented from playing the remaining two games. His loss was felt the next day when the team suffered their first setback to Holists, 7-0.
