Welcome to parents

A welcome is extended to the parents of MIT students who are visiting the campus during this weekend. The Parents' Weekend Committee has arranged a lively program for you, and we hope you will enjoy it.

MIT is a busy and changing institution, and you will see evidence of its many physical growth and in the many construction projects rising around the campus. In later visits here, you will find MIT much different in appearance, and the new construction has already made a new look worthwhile if you have already visited MIT.

MIT is more than buildings, though, and you will also have an opportunity to meet some of the faculty who have helped build MIT, to reflect at the center of science and technology. The current issue of The New Yorker described MIT's surprising faculty is now doing. Remember those science-fiction stories?

The subsequent decision of the board, including three students and ten administration officials, will result in an increase in the number of trans-Atlantic flights for at least the duration of this summer.
