"What's matter, be ddy? Don'tcha see da lights?" This might be the typical reaction of a police officer to a person who has just stepped out of the way to the typical Techeran crossing Mass. Ave. It was also the typical reaction of Columbus patrolmen to the pedestrian habits of Ohio State students—until recently.

But then Metamorphosis hit Columbus. The reaction changed to: "Have a warrant for your arrest if you jaywalk. Get your coat and come with me." The first to learn of this new policy was a female student who had neglected to pay a jaywalking ticket.

She was arrested at her house one evening, brought to the Columbus police station, subjected to an "unreasonable" search for concealed articles, and thrown into a dark cell where she was held for an hour and a half until $15 bond was posted, in addition.

Garage on Vassar St. will hold 400 autos

The parking garage on Vassar Street is scheduled for completion on April 27. It will hold over 400 cars on five levels, plus basement. There will be a pedestrian bridge leading from the third floor parking level to Altman Street at the end of the Magnet Lab.

The new garage is located near the northeast corner, and will not result in significantly more parking spaces because of new construction in the area.

This second garage is different from the first in that it is constructed with precast concrete panels. The parking areas are flat and there are two-way traffic lanes at each level of the building.

Cavett N. Goff of Parking Development Company, Boston was architect for the building.
