Sailing: Squads third in continent

The MIT sailing team, under the direction of former Star Class champion Joe Duplin, placed third in the North American Monotype Championships and actually they did would much better than their third place finish in MIT.

In the recent years, the MIT sailing team has become one of the strongest in the country, thanks to the leadership of Joe Duplin. The team has been able to attract some of the best sailors in the country, and they have been able to compete at the highest level.

Joe Duplin came to MIT with a wealth of experience, having sailed in many of the top races around the world. He was able to impart his knowledge and skills to the team, and they were able to learn from him.

The team's success can be attributed to the hard work and dedication of the sailors, as well as the support of the coaches and staff. The sailors have been able to combine their individual strengths to create a strong and cohesive team.

The MIT sailing team has been able to compete at the highest level, and they are looking forward to continuing their success in the future.
