President's race
Mock election spurs debate

Goldwater
By David F. Nolan
Twenty days from now, there will be a mock presidential election at MIT, and for the first time, each of you will be given the chance to express your preference in a contest complete with candidates and the obligation to speak out on the issues and candidates in this critical presidential campaign. To those who reject reactionary and dangerously simplistic solutions to the complex domestic and foreign problems confronting the nation, we welcome you. Republication is the one allegiance, to join us in the cause of electing men of reason, ability and responsibility as our spokesmen. Towards realizing this goal, a bipartisan graduate and undergraduate committee has recently formed the MIT Student Section of Scientists and Engineers for Johnson and Humphrey. Allied with this in every effort are the MIT Young Democrats and Republicans of the faculties and secretarial staffs. In keeping with the spirit of bipartisanship, one of our first activities has been to canvas members of the MIT Community in registering to vote. Circulants, while calling upon the registrants instructing prospective voters as to where they might vote, have urged them to forward further information concerning their eligibility. We trust that, as a result of our efforts, many of you will be able to and will vote in the presidential election.

Although the MIT Student Section of Scientists and Engineers for Johnson and Humphrey was one short week ago tacit (at the time of this writing), it can proudly proclaim the host of supporters larger than any of the previously established local organizations. New members and campaign contributions are being accepted at our booth, in the Lobby of Building 10.

The first formal meeting of the Goldwater forces will be tomorrow evening at 7:30 in the Brown Dining Room. All MIT students and those actively supporting either Senator Goldwater and his ideals, or President Johnson and the things he stands for, are invited to attend. It is reported that "seabreeze" will again be provided in abundance.

Student Opportunities Committee uses registration questionnaire

(Continued from page 4) students concerning various firms and positions open to them. Also, effort is being made to contact the companies directly to obtain specific information concerning MIT in particular and perhaps some short summary to make our study of the material easier. We are also attaching the foreign student's problem of obtaining worthwhile summer employment in the United States. This is an area in which much can be accomplished by interesting companies in this untapped potential. It is possible that some of the students of the great benefits to be gained from experience in America industry. The gathering of information through registration material is another example of our trying to reach the desires of students as nearly as possible with the opportunities available and gathering of suggestions with which perhaps we can do nothing. There is no doubt that this information has given us a good basis for the general opinion to work from and will increase our effectiveness this coming year.

This committee has been developed for the welfare and to keep abreast of ever-changing recruiting activities in all firms, and especially the student body. We are certainly eager to hear any suggestions on how to improve our present programs or ideas as to new areas where we might like to hear any unique and effective ways to make the various opportunities known to all students.

The Student Opportunities Committee will hold its first general meeting Tuesday, October 21, at 7:30 p.m. in the Science Center (10-260). There are a few open spots on the committee for interested students and this is an excellent opportunity for you to present your pet ideas and discuss them with fellow committee members. Don't forget! Read the announcements which will be published in the Jackson Review and S.A.E. for details as opportunities are made available. We can only hope for three committee members, but at least one student should attend each meeting so we can find out what we have available to us.

The theme of the party will be in a pirate ship, the H.M.S. Corsair, "Pirateskinn." Tickets for admission will be a date and place announced. It is reported that "seabreeze" will again be provided in abundance.
