The campus forum

The Tech, as the official newspaper of the MIT undergraduates, has certain duties and responsibilities. It is our job to act as liaison between the administration, student government and other campus activities, and the student body as a whole. It is also our duty to be the forum—and the conscience—of campus opinion. In our attempts to persuade our policy to encourage open communication with campus leaders and any interested students. We hope to improve the immediacy and relevance of their advice, and develop knowledge and experience of the campus leaders and the opinions of the average undergraduate.

Without the cooperation of the undergraduates.

In the past we have been plagued by complaints when wordy, illegible, and often incomprehensible material was handed in to us, and subsequently not printed. We have been reprimanded for cutting and editing articles.

The Tech reserves its editorial prerogative—and its responsibility—to ensure that material to be printed is reasonably stated and properly composed and typed. Our job is made easier when care is taken to observe everything subsequent to the requirements imposed by time, grammar, and common sense.

We hope to meet the challenges posed by the beginning of the new year and the proposed changes in student government. To that end we intend to seek the help of campus leaders to make the Tech a meaningful campus opinion. Responsibility for intelligent action rests with the students; we are merely reporting and editorializing, with The Tech.

TEN: the new look

No management does not always mean new style or new quality; thus we do not expect the first issue of the year's first issue of Tech Engineering News was released. The concept of science fiction has changed considerably since the days when the News was a part of the newspaper.

The full-color cover, the better paper, and the finer typeface, attractive though they are, are not as different as the new editorial staff is from the previous administration. The new editorial staff is不同 from the previous administration. The new editorial staff is composed of individuals from various departments, each with special interests in the field of science fiction. The new editorial staff is different from the previous administration. The new editorial staff is composed of individuals from various departments, each with special interests in the field of science fiction. The new editorial staff is not the same as the previous administration. The new editorial staff is different from the previous administration. The new editorial staff is composed of individuals from various departments, each with special interests in the field of science fiction. The new editorial staff is not the same as the previous administration. The new editorial staff is different from the previous administration. The new editorial staff is...