State Science Fair held

Dean Pietro Belluschi of the MIT School of Architecture and Planning has been named to aid in planning a 3500-are Mountain community at Santa Monica Mountain property in Los Angeles, Calif.

His appointment to the unprecedented national advisory committee which will assist Sunset International Petroleum Corporation of Los Angeles was announced by Morton A. Stering, President of Sunset.

The property to be developed is part of the steep, rocky and wild Mountain Park area of Los Angeles, that has hitherto been considered undevelopable.

Dean Belluschi commented, "The planning approach being developed for this project will eliminate much of the guesswork, preserve the intangible assets, and produce a unique rationale for a new type of community in an area where previous standards have not been solidified."

The Dean explained that ideas will be drawn "from the best of the older European city concepts built on hillside land." These ideas will be incorporated into new architecture and construction.

"The planning advisory committee undoubtedly is the largest effort ever made to probe the implications of developing an urban area and retaining the natural beauty and resources," according to Mr. Stering.
