The Cambridge Electron Accelerator's large bubble chamber, damaged in explosion July 5, will be rebuilt at a cost of $150,000. The Chamber was used for research in high-energy physics and is an important tool for understanding the fundamental forces of nature.

Vietnam demonstrations

By Ted Nygreen

Last Friday evening and Saturday was a time of many student reactions to the Viet- nam protest war in Viet-

The MIT Committee which organ- izes the 'Springtime for Peace' Vietnam protest march passed MIT about 2 o'clock Saturday afternoon, a group of about 300 people, with others joining up along the way. The purpose of the march was to express a significant number of counter-demonstrators. Several signs were seen denouncing American foreign policy.

The papers reported a sizable number of marchers in almost every major American city. It is reported that marchers on New York's Fifth Avenue numbered about 5,000.

Monday, President Johnson expressed his disappointment that such a considerable number of citizens had taken the effort to express their disapproval of his foreign policy. Subsequently, those who had expressed the right of free speech, the Presi- dent said he believed this be- came corrupted by the mercenary philosophy of American determi- nation.

Grad students advised to request deferments

In the face of increased draft calls, the Graduate School will be- come involved in making requests for deferments to students over 26 as well as to those under 26. The Graduate School has been directed by the government to handle the area professors stimulated serious interest in the political and social implications of any heckling or counterprotest- ants, and their dates' names and live in groups, must be sub- mission.
