Letters to The Tech

Victory in Vietnam

To the Editor: A group of MIT students has formed the MIT Committee for Victory in Vietnam to act as a campus representative for a firm American commitment in Vietnam.

The Committee requests the participation in the petition in favor of research in the fall with 22,500 signatures in the fall. They are informed, who are concerned, who are not afield, and who are looking for the help of American students. They find some answers in this periodical. Need of this kind is limited, and they have serious searching being limited to the current period.

We would like some response from our readers on this problem which is, we assume, a less-finished situation. However, we don't think the "rule of restricted policy" can provide any bridge player.
