NSF Fellowships awarded to 4 Institute professors

By Sue Downs

Four MIT associate professors were among the 421 professors who received National Science Foundation Fellowships for the year of 1966.

Three of the professors, Glenn E. Gordon (Chemistry), Paul Fen-field, Jr. (EE), and Abner E. Shi-papants; a basic requirement for two of these fellows is possession of a doctoral degree in science or engineering for at least the past five years. Science Faculty Fellowships were awarded to 326 of the 1078 college and university teachers who applied so that they would have an opportunity to enhance their effectiveness as teachers. Receiving the loan from MIT is Prof. Harold Nathan of the Mathematics Department. Dr. Gordon will use his fellowship to study geometry at the University of California (San Diego); Dr. Pressfield will attend the Imperial College of Science and Technology (London) to study electrical engineering. Dr. Shippy will remain at MIT to study the history of philosophy and science, and Prof. Nathan will attend the University of Paris to study the history of science and philosophy.

These Science Faculty Fellows from other universities who will study at MIT are Frederic G. Fowles from Duke University (Civil Engineering), Howard A. Coleman from Boston University (Mechanical Engineering), Milton B. Langer of the University of Minnesota (Mechanical Engineering), Maurice Albertson of Colorado State University (Engineering), and John H. Nash from Colorado State University (Civil Engineering).

MIT receives $36,000 from Wilson Foundation

By John Corwin

MIT is receiving $36,000 from the Woodrow Wilson National Fellowship Foundation this month, it was announced today. Graduate schools at the Institute and 13 other universities throughout the nation will receive a total of about $1.5 million in this ninth year of the great program. The graduate schools are asked to spend three-fourths of their respective grants on aid to students who have completed at least one year of graduate study. The schools are free to use the remaining fourth of the grant in any way they choose to advance graduate education, according to Sir Hugh Taylor, the Foundation's president.

Seven schools are receiving money for the first time. They are Drexel U., Illinois Institute of Technology, The New School for Social Research, Oregon State U., U. of Southern California, Wesleyan U. and W.T. State U. Other schools receiving grants include Brown University ($92,000), Colgate ($12,000), Harvard University ($160,000), and Tufts University ($35,000).

The Woodrow Wilson National Fellowship Foundation recruits its fellows every year from a wide variety of fields, including business, government, education, and other professions.

Graduate schools at the Institute have previous experience in all areas of education for the newly named restaurant. Twenty Chinnneys are seen on the marquee now the breakfast, lunch and dinner menu will be worded, Ralph Lazarus, "We looked long and hard for the kind of man that Howard Johnson is, and we are hereby sorry to lose him. But we understand perfectly of the decision of Howard Johnson and why he felt obliged to accept the presidency—a job that has important implications for all of us."

Joint Urban Studies Center to receive $1.4 million grant

By David Selfman

The Harvard-MIT Joint Center for Urban Studies has been awarded a seven-year, $1.4 million grant to implement the Ford Foundation's grant to the Ford Foundation in support of joint urbanism. The grant to the Foundation has totalled $18 million since 1961.

-founded 1959, the Center has been supported up to now by two Harvard-MIT joint endowments, the present monograph, though providing substantial increase in the scope of the Center's activities. The present award, a "vote of confidence" in the organization, to the President of the Institute, who is at the Center, regards this new award a "vote of confidence" in the organization.

All applicants must be eligible for admission to the center, will be followed by a $20,000 grant to the Faculty Committee for the Center's purpose of the new award, the Center's present organization. The Center is established to encourage and support the study of urban problems of all kinds by bringing together scholars from a wide variety of fields, including law, political science, economics, architecture, and public policy. It is structured to encourage collaborative research and to provide a forum for the exchange of ideas. The Center is designed to attract outstanding graduate students and to provide a base for the development of urban studies as a discipline.
