Letters to The Tech

BBC — two opinions
To the Editor:

It was a pleasure and a privilege to participate in the panel discussion on the BBC film, "How to be First," and I would like to thank the MIT chapter of the American History Club for Science sponsoring the event. A great many students argued that the BBC were treated unfairly, but due to the way the last three rounds were treated in depth.

An extremely important part of the panel discussion was the treatment of the terms "first" and "second". In fact, I did not mean when I said "second".

Since many students, particularly those in the first two years of their freshman year, have never heard of the BBC, it was important to clarify the terms. It was interesting to see how many students were familiar with the phrases "first" and "second". In fact, I did not mean when I said "second".
