Talking Rock...

some hope for these people to rise out of this rut ("You don't know what you're missing ... the world is at your command") but that they will never do anything about it ("Take your time ... Leave it all till somebody else lends you a hand."). Nancy Sinatra

This big two is going to be hard-pressed to knock out the nation's present top two, 'Ballad of the Green Berets' and 'These Boots Are Made For Walking', which seem to have a strong hold on the top spots. Nancy Sinatra, whose 'Boots' is number two, is Under excellent direction. Writer and producer of her hit is Lee Hazlewood. As a producer he is somewhat unusual in that he records all of the background music and rhythm first and then works with the vocalist as she listens to this and records on another track. 'Boots' was number one in both Britain and America for one week.

Sgt. Barry Sadler's 'Berets' is definitely the biggest song so far in 1966. With over 2 million sales in 11/2 months, the ballad ranks number one on Billboard's pop and easy listening charts and has even invaded the country charts, where it is the fastest climbing song. The song is a tribute to the parachute-jumping Special Forces known as the Green Berets.
