2 graduate students in XVII win Woodrow Wilson Fellowships

Mrs. Deborah Rosenfeld Hensler and Mrs. Norma Preston Zva, both MIT graduate students, and both doctoral candidates in political science, are award winners of Woodrow Wilson Dissertation Fellowships.

Mrs. Hensler held her fellowship this summer while she began writing her thesis on "The Role of the Middle-Class in Local Politics."

Mrs. Hensler, who spent the summer of 1965 in Turkey on a research project for the Agency on International Development, will develop her thesis during the coming year on the changing patterns in Turkish Administration. An MIT alumnus, Frank S. Levy '65, now a graduate student in Economics at Yale University, has also won a Dissertation Fellowship. His topic will be "What are the Dollars and Costs of Integrating Boston's Elementary Schools?"

Fellowships are awarded on the basis of the best theses proposed by the most highly qualified candidates as compared to others in the same field of study.

The Woodrow Wilson National Fellowship Foundation, operating under the grants from the Ford Foundation, has as its aim the encouragement and support of potential college teachers.

ROTC's first Buddy Day conducted at Fort Devens

MIT's first Army ROTC Buddy Day was highlighted by a practice session on the Fort Devens rifle range. Saturday's event was held to introduce freshmen and non-ROTC cadets to Army operations.

After broadcast the seventy Army ROTC cadet boarders busses for Fort Devens, which is located near Boston. There the students were given a tour of the post, the field training area, and the Hospital Facility, a single system within which provides all parts and repairs for Army units throughout New England.

The students toured the "main-line" rifle range, which attempts to simulate actual battle conditions and to the radio. Each cadet positioned himself in a foxhole with an M-41 rifle, and at the signal, attempted to hit a series of silhouettes of targets at varying distances, each of which was visible for seven seconds.

Following lunch, a lecture and demonstration was given on the construction and maintenance of the M-41 rifle, the Army's basic infantry weapon. This concluded the day's rain-shorted program. The individual and group combat proficiency test, originally planned for the afternoon, were cancelled because of a severe weather forecast.
