Field Day events announced

By Mark Botelho

The traditional Field Day matinee of the Froshman Class against the Sophomore Class, slated for 10 pm Friday, Nov. 11, will take on a new twist this year. In addition to occurring on a Friday for the first time, Field Day will have a unifying theme underlying each of its events.

The theme of Field Day will be that of war game. Every year, in order to keep the Froshman Class in line, the Sophomores stage a facade of war. This year, the Froshmen are being urged to participate in so-called "field exercises". The game is set to begin at 10 am in the Lobdell Dining Room.

The Froshmen are going to be presented with a war map of Lebanon and problems of the Lebanon migrants with special mention to Field Day Chairman Dick Coulter, who will preside over the event. The Sophomores, led by Professor Yadin, will use the map to demonstrate the tactics of war.

For those who are not familiar with Field Day, the event is designed to be a series of war games which will test the students' skills in matters of strategy, tactics, and organization.

Field Day is going to be a competition between the Froshman and Sophomore Classes in matters of war. The Froshmen will be divided into teams and will be given a war map of Lebanon to study. They will then be asked to develop a strategy for the war. The Sophomores will then present their strategy to the Froshmen, who will then be asked to respond to it. The game will continue until a winner is declared.

Field Day is a long-standing tradition at MIT, and is always a popular event. This year, the event is expected to be especially exciting, as the Sophomores have promised to make it the most challenging Field Day ever.
