(Ed. note — The following editorial is one of a series written by MIT students representing student groups holding divergent opinions on campus issues. The columns are presented in order to stimulate thought and discussion on these issues.)

The Executive Committee of the Student Center, for the purpose of construct a pedestrian bridge at 77 Mass Ave to improve traffic safety. This is an expedient solution to one of several problems the Student Center faces. The Committee's decision represents the opinion of the staff or Board of Directors of this newspaper.

After only one year of operation the Student Center is bursting at the seams. Activities offices and meeting rooms are now filled to capacity, and groups are being turned away in one of the libraries. Originally half of the library area was set aside for activities expansion, but for some time now the library itself has been filled to capacity.

We expect this shortage of activity space to intensify over the next few semesters. The demand for bowling and billiards facilities has increased with each passing week. More and more of the campus is being used in one way or another. Over $16,000 in improvements over the past two years has been made at the Center, and the need is now, after two years, to decide whether or not to construct a new Student Center.

The complex and pressing problems of the Student Center require much time. Hence, we propose a reevaluation of the bridge proposal to be held next month.

In the meantime, it is critical to provide additional storage space. The school year is coming to an end, and the need is now, after two years, to decide whether or not to construct a new Student Center.
