Hillel

By George Kattan

One of the most active organizations on campus is the Hillel Society, whose purpose is to present all aspects of Judaism to the general public as well as to serve as a Jewish community for students away from home. According to president Gene Fox ('67), Hillel is more than just a club, it is a way of life for approximately one-fourth of the Jewish members of the MIT student body. The society itself is rather young—its chairman here at MIT was founded fifteen years ago, for the last fourteen of which Rabbi Horace Pallach has been director of activities. The local chapter is associated with the Jewish National Organization through an arrangement by which the chapter remains independent although taking advantage of national affiliations.

The Hillel chapter has a wide variety of regular activities which are beneficial to all students. Most important, the society sponsors Friday night worship services which are open to members of any religious faith. Second, Hillel sponsors Sunday brunches at 30-30 in the Student Center where such Jewish snacks as bagels are available.

Finally, the society sponsors the weekly publication of Shavuot, the Jewish arts magazine. The highest honor that can be bestowed upon any organization on campus is the Hillel Award, which is the highest honor that can be bestowed upon any organization on campus. Within this community of Hillel, there is an idealism and an attempt to continue all projects, thus creating opportunities for all members of the student body to regardless of religious affiliation, to join by service in this community.

The initial response has led Nichols to believe that the goal of $1,000 may be exceeded.

VooDoo Editor
to discuss humor

Keith Patterson '67, editor of VooDoo, will participate in a panel discussion on American humor on WBUR's 'Conference Call.'

The initial response has led Nichols to believe that the goal of $1,000 may be exceeded.

VooDoo Editor
to discuss humor

Keith Patterson '67, editor of VooDoo, will participate in a panel discussion on American humor on WBUR's 'Conference Call.'

The initial response has led Nichols to believe that the goal of $1,000 may be exceeded.

VooDoo Editor
to discuss humor

Keith Patterson '67, editor of VooDoo, will participate in a panel discussion on American humor on WBUR's 'Conference Call.'

The initial response has led Nichols to believe that the goal of $1,000 may be exceeded.