FELD OF INSCOMM: In addition to handling specific current problems, the Institute Committee could generate new ideas and plans. The Housing and Educational Policy Committee held this year a good meeting in this direction. However, I would suggest an ad hoc committee of five INS COMM members to debate and evaluate all proposals after such a conference. With a written report on adding some viewpoints and alternates and forming specific cones, we can effect some real changes, rather than merely preating our unformulated attitude to the administration and personnel who attend.

Boston Council: There are many problems that affect MIT undergraduate students that cannot be solved by an MIT body alone. Ins-ance of this sort include the exension of the NTA service hours, a realistic student discount program, and an intensified course registration program. During my year, the Boston Council, I have initiated action in all three of these areas. Moreover, the Council can serve as a discussion forum and source of new approaches to new projects.

I feel that my experience in student activities has qualified me to deal with these problems, and I ask for your support.
