WHO'S GOT THE BUTTON?

I'm sure it has not escaped your notice that underlying the adoring whistle which has made such a popular favorite among my wife and my little dog Spot, is a serious attempt to stay abreast of the problems that beset the American college student.

I have lived five years in a campus—talking to undergraduates, listening to their troubles, hearing their stories and their songs. And, naturally, the second and third most popular buttons I saw on my last trip were: "WALLACE" and "Pro-ENGINEER DATE MUSCATEL." The first most popular button was, as well known, "SCRAP THE SCRAPES" which is worn, as we all know, by Perssona Super Stainless Steel Blade users who, as we all know, are proud to proclaim to the world that they have such blades which gives them luxury shave after luxury shave, which comes both in double edge style and Injector style, which does indeed shave the razor blade; it is also an employer.

I make frequent trips, as I say, to learn what is currently vexing the American undergraduate. Last week, for example, which is a prominent Eastern University (Idaho State) I talked to a number of engineering seniors and asked a serious question. All students, they had come to college to fill themselves with culture, but, alas, because of all their science requirements, they simply had to take time to make the liberal arts courses their young souls hallowed after. "Are we doomed," they asked gloomily. "To go through that culturized"

I, with a resounding "No!" I told them the culture they had missed in college, they would pick up after graduation. I explained that today's enlightened corporations are setting up on the job liberal arts programs for the newly employed engineers—launched a campaign to light a brighter, more enlightened corporation realizes that the truly cultured employee is a truly valuable employee.

To illustrate, I cited the well-known case of Champert-S跨界 of Pardus.

WHEN CHAMPETT HAD COMPLETED his degree in wing nuts and dunes, reported to be the highest in the university for the period, he then had the acceptance letter, he was not rushed to a drawing board. He was first installed in the enlightened corporation's training campus. Here he was given a beanie, a room-mate, and a copy of the company's manual. The training program proceeded to fill the gap in his culture.

He was told to read, then to print capital letters, then capital and small letters. (There was also an app to help him spell, but it was ultimately abandoned.)

I explained that these fundamental, Champert progressed slowly through the more complex company disciplines. He was diligent, and the corporation was patient, and in the end, the highly well-rewarded employee, he could play a clavier, parse a sentence, and name the flowers of Rose.

Poised and cultured, Champert was promptly placed in an important executive position. I am pleased to report that he served with distinction, growing because three days later he received retirement.

Today, still busy, he lives in St. Petersburg, Florida, where he supplements his pension by continuing to serve for tourists.

* * *

A sentence that is easy to parse: Subject—"you.

Object—"your eating comfort when you are Barmo-Shave, regular or menthol, along with your Perssona Super Stainless Steel Blades."

Vietnam conference condemns US actions

By Terri Kimmels

The Cornell Student Conference on Vietnam, held two weeks ago, assembled for its second session this week. It became immediately apparent that the same sympathies were decisively opposed to the Vietnam War in varying degrees. This is not highly unusual, however, when we consider the assumptions made by calling the Conference. Normally, intermediate conferences are not called to endorse present policies—certainly not in this country where conference delegations are paid for by their school.

The MIT delegation was chosen by the Executive Committee of the Conference to present a wide spectrum of political sympathies. Chosen were Ray Latham, Chairman of YAF; Kevin Grundy, IFC Chairman, and Michael Yoell, President of the MIT chapter of SDS. Yoell was unable to attend and was later replaced by Jeff Wasser, President of Baker House and the Dormitory Committee.

ARE YOU UNDER 35?

LOOK AT THIS!

5-Year Renewable Term Savings
Bank

Life Insurance

Savings Bank

$25,000 for less than $57 a year

$20,000 for less than $40 a year

$15,000 for less than $34 a year

$10,000 for less than $24 a year

$5,000 for less than $15 a year

For last three times, order three times, and announced that "You're out of order; this whole Conference is out of order... It's not representative of student opinion and I'm leaving." The Conference was finally forced to proceed, with a statement that "You're out of order; this whole Conference is out of order... It's not representative of student opinion and I'm leaving."