30 win NSF fellowships; all present grants renewed

The National Science Foundation has announced that 30 MIT seniors are among 1,496 students throughout the country who received NSF Graduate Study Fellowships. These awards are made to accelerate the output of highly qualified scientists by encouraging outstanding students to obtain full-time advanced graduate training in the sciences.

The new awards are in addition to continuation awards offered to 92 other MIT graduate students. All those graduate students at MIT who applied for renewal of their fellowships did indeed have them continued.

Graduate Fellowships provide basic stipends of $2400 for the first-year level of graduate study, $2600 for study at the intermediate level, and $2800 for the terminal year.
