Goodbye 10 percent

It appears as if the day of the 10% reduction are gone for at least a while at the Coop. Mr. McQuarrie's reasons for the cut can not be faulted—the Coop has undergone extensive expansion here and especially at Harvard. That, in addition to a change in tax law, mean the difference of a few dollars to most students when the refund checks are available.

However, the Coop is not down, he automatically takes his chances with the rise and fall of profits in the firm, for obviously the Coop cannot distribute the profits (the refunds) which have never accrued. But what is irksome about this is that the Coop has never made this fact known to his customers. By all it advertising it indicates that students will receive 10% on cash purchases and 8% on charged items. This particular fact has always been assumed an invariant and was often a persuasive argument to tolerate the Coop's prices which were not always client friendly.

It is unfortunate that the executives of the Coop could not foresee some of this increased cost and have preserved the 10% Mr. McQuarrie had to consider any measures which would bring back old number 10 as soon as possible.

Express your view

Every year at this time we like to remind everyone that The Tech offers the opportunity for students and faculty alike to express their opinions through letters to the editor. We do not mind criticism and occasional corrections.

Letters are welcomed and mailed to our offices in the Student Center. We will print as many as possible, but space does not permit every letter to be published; a brief one stands the best chance of being printed.

The Tech will also, from time to time, offer its editorial columns to guest editors from students or groups with a particular issue of general interest. Those wishing to take advantage of this should contact Managing Editor Greg Arenson '70 at least two weeks in advance of publication.

A coed reacts to the Institute

My roommate's not here yet... orientation lecture at 8:00... that's only six hours away... I'd better go to buy... I spent four hours talking to people I didn't yesterday...

That's still not very meaningful... Professor Gray... God, there are so many boys... no, you can't fall asleep here... I'm here to talk about... oh... excuse me...

"Hi, Howard!"... yes...

"Hey, we've got the same advisor..."

"Yeah, I guess so...

"Hello, I'm Professor..."

I've never advised undergraduates before, so I'm going to learn as much from you as you will from... good grief... What did she mean, so idle smile..."

It's a party school..."

"Yeah, I signed up for several activities..."

"You'll go to a Leesey mixer. I'm a girl, remember..."

"Yeah, I'm picking up the Institute's ombudsmen..."

"... I'm still afraid to cross Mass. Ave..."

"Ouch, you were a coed..."

"Yeah, I'm a GIRL..."
