More cross-registrants found in Wellesley test

By Jack Katz

Last Tuesday's The Tech carried a story of two students who are already benefiting from Wellesley-MIT cross registration. Two others, Al Singer of MIT and Anne Tetty of Wellesley, both seniors are also cross registered this term, and are both enjoying the experience.

Singer enrolled in a Wellesley course because he felt it was required for proficiency in his major and he could not find an equivalent at MIT. He is majoring in philosophy and is taking a seminar in Kant which is taught by an instructor who is considered one of the best on the subject in this area.

Anne Tetty is a German major who has enrolled in an introductory linguistics course at MIT. Miss Tetty is taking the course to broaden her major in a way that she would not be able to at her own school. Her linguistics course is taught on a graduate level, and she finds the scientific approach greatly increases her perspective on language.

Transportation

Anne Tetty's class meets three times a week, and she commutes by MTA. Though time consuming she thinks the trip is worth it. She also feels that many other Wellesley girls would be interested in taking courses at MIT.

Singer commutes by car, but only once a week. In general, he finds Wellesley students too punctual with assignments for the MIT frame of mind, however, he finds walking into a classroom full of girls an enjoyable experience.

At last in paperback!

Are You A Slow Reader?

A noted publisher in Chicago reports there is a simple technique of rapid reading which should enable you to double your reading speed and yet retain much more. Most people do not realize how much they could increase their reading skill, the company has printed rules for developing rapid reading faster and more accurately.

According to this publisher, anyone, regardless of his present reading skill, can use this simple technique to improve his reading ability to a remarkable degree. Whether reading stories, books, technical matter, it becomes possible to read sentences at a glance and entire pages in seconds with this method.

To acquaint the readers of this newspaper with the easy-to-follow rules for developing rapid reading skill, the company has printed full details of its interesting self-teaching method in a new booklet, "How to Read Faster and Retain More," mailed free. No obligation. Send your name, address, and zip code to Reading, 835 Division, Dept. 62928, Chicago, Ill. 60614. A postcard will do.
