The opening bid was a Weak Two Bid, now preferred by most tournament players to the three no-trump. When he forced West to ruff, the defenders had no choice. Even the most secure contracts can sometimes be defeated by this technique. In today's hand, we have an example of such a situation. Declarer thought it unlikely that declarer would have more than two trumps, with which he would be unable to make any contract. However, declarer was able to make his contract with his last heart. Since he had no alternative but to ruff, declarer had no choice but to go on to game.

Declarer thought there was nothing he could have done to prevent it. The opening bid was a Weak Two Bid, now preferred by most tournament players to the three no-trump. When he forced West to ruff, the defenders had no choice. Even the most secure contracts can sometimes be defeated by this technique. In today's hand, we have an example of such a situation. Declarer thought it unlikely that declarer would have more than two trumps, with which he would be unable to make any contract. However, declarer was able to make his contract with his last heart. Since he had no alternative but to ruff, declarer had no choice but to go on to game.

Declarer thought there was nothing he could have done to prevent it. The opening bid was a Weak Two Bid, now preferred by most tournament players to the three no-trump. When he forced West to ruff, the defenders had no choice. Even the most secure contracts can sometimes be defeated by this technique. In today's hand, we have an example of such a situation. Declarer thought it unlikely that declarer would have more than two trumps, with which he would be unable to make any contract. However, declarer was able to make his contract with his last heart. Since he had no alternative but to ruff, declarer had no choice but to go on to game.

Declarer thought there was nothing he could have done to prevent it. The opening bid was a Weak Two Bid, now preferred by most tournament players to the three no-trump. When he forced West to ruff, the defenders had no choice. Even the most secure contracts can sometimes be defeated by this technique. In today's hand, we have an example of such a situation. Declarer thought it unlikely that declarer would have more than two trumps, with which he would be unable to make any contract. However, declarer was able to make his contract with his last heart. Since he had no alternative but to ruff, declarer had no choice but to go on to game.

Declarer thought there was nothing he could have done to prevent it. The opening bid was a Weak Two Bid, now preferred by most tournament players to the three no-trump. When he forced West to ruff, the defenders had no choice. Even the most secure contracts can sometimes be defeated by this technique. In today's hand, we have an example of such a situation. Declarer thought it unlikely that declarer would have more than two trumps, with which he would be unable to make any contract. However, declarer was able to make his contract with his last heart. Since he had no alternative but to ruff, declarer had no choice but to go on to game.

Declarer thought there was nothing he could have done to prevent it. The opening bid was a Weak Two Bid, now preferred by most tournament players to the three no-trump. When he forced West to ruff, the defenders had no choice. Even the most secure contracts can sometimes be defeated by this technique. In today's hand, we have an example of such a situation. Declarer thought it unlikely that declarer would have more than two trumps, with which he would be unable to make any contract. However, declarer was able to make his contract with his last heart. Since he had no alternative but to ruff, declarer had no choice but to go on to game.

Declarer thought there was nothing he could have done to prevent it. The opening bid was a Weak Two Bid, now preferred by most tournament players to the three no-trump. When he forced West to ruff, the defenders had no choice. Even the most secure contracts can sometimes be defeated by this technique. In today's hand, we have an example of such a situation. Declarer thought it unlikely that declarer would have more than two trumps, with which he would be unable to make any contract. However, declarer was able to make his contract with his last heart. Since he had no alternative but to ruff, declarer had no choice but to go on to game.

Declarer thought there was nothing he could have done to prevent it. The opening bid was a Weak Two Bid, now preferred by most tournament players to the three no-trump. When he forced West to ruff, the defenders had no choice. Even the most secure contracts can sometimes be defeated by this technique. In today's hand, we have an example of such a situation. Declarer thought it unlikely that declarer would have more than two trumps, with which he would be unable to make any contract. However, declarer was able to make his contract with his last heart. Since he had no alternative but to ruff, declarer had no choice but to go on to game.

Declarer thought there was nothing he could have done to prevent it. The opening bid was a Weak Two Bid, now preferred by most tournament players to the three no-trump. When he forced West to ruff, the defenders had no choice. Even the most secure contracts can sometimes be defeated by this technique. In today's hand, we have an example of such a situation. Declarer thought it unlikely that declarer would have more than two trumps, with which he would be unable to make any contract. However, declarer was able to make his contract with his last heart. Since he had no alternative but to ruff, declarer had no choice but to go on to game.

Declarer thought there was nothing he could have done to prevent it. The opening bid was a Weak Two Bid, now preferred by most tournament players to the three no-trump. When he forced West to ruff, the defenders had no choice. Even the most secure contracts can sometimes be defeated by this technique. In today's hand, we have an example of such a situation. Declarer thought it unlikely that declarer would have more than two trumps, with which he would be unable to make any contract. However, declarer was able to make his contract with his last heart. Since he had no alternative but to ruff, declarer had no choice but to go on to game.

Declarer thought there was nothing he could have done to prevent it. The opening bid was a Weak Two Bid, now preferred by most tournament players to the three no-trump. When he forced West to ruff, the defenders had no choice. Even the most secure contracts can sometimes be defeated by this technique. In today's hand, we have an example of such a situation. Declarer thought it unlikely that declarer would have more than two trumps, with which he would be unable to make any contract. However, declarer was able to make his contract with his last heart. Since he had no alternative but to ruff, declarer had no choice but to go on to game.

Declarer thought there was nothing he could have done to prevent it. The opening bid was a Weak Two Bid, now preferred by most tournament players to the three no-trump. When he forced West to ruff, the defenders had no choice. Even the most secure contracts can sometimes be defeated by this technique. In today's hand, we have an example of such a situation. Declarer thought it unlikely that declarer would have more than two trumps, with which he would be unable to make any contract. However, declarer was able to make his contract with his last heart. Since he had no alternative but to ruff, declarer had no choice but to go on to game.

Declarer thought there was nothing he could have done to prevent it. The opening bid was a Weak Two Bid, now preferred by most tournament players to the three no-trump. When he forced West to ruff, the defenders had no choice. Even the most secure contracts can sometimes be defeated by this technique. In today's hand, we have an example of such a situation. Declarer thought it unlikely that declarer would have more than two trumps, with which he would be unable to make any contract. However, declarer was able to make his contract with his last heart. Since he had no alternative but to ruff, declarer had no choice but to go on to game.

Declarer thought there was nothing he could have done to prevent it. The opening bid was a Weak Two Bid, now preferred by most tournament players to the three no-trump. When he forced West to ruff, the defenders had no choice. Even the most secure contracts can sometimes be defeated by this technique. In today's hand, we have an example of such a situation. Declarer thought it unlikely that declarer would have more than two trumps, with which he would be unable to make any contract. However, declarer was able to make his contract with his last heart. Since he had no alternative but to ruff, declarer had no choice but to go on to game.

Declarer thought there was nothing he could have done to prevent it. The opening bid was a Weak Two Bid, now preferred by most tournament players to the three no-trump. When he forced West to ruff, the defenders had no choice. Even the most secure contracts can sometimes be defeated by this technique. In today's hand, we have an example of such a situation. Declarer thought it unlikely that declarer would have more than two trumps, with which he would be unable to make any contract. However, declarer was able to make his contract with his last heart. Since he had no alternative but to ruff, declarer had no choice but to go on to game.