Real Chicago blues at 47

By Randy Hamilton

Talks, the blues band has been a product of a musical experience that has been a product of the Detroit soul sound. This is the sound of electric instruments that is punctuated by a tenor saxophone and piano, and it has gained an audience that is enamored of the non-"tinny-boy" band.

The James Cotton Blues Band is currently displaying the talent that has made it one of the top blues bands in the country. Only Butte Coffee House has been able to rival the energy and enthusiasm of the band's recent concert experience, and the Detroit scene is currently displaying the talent of the James Cotton Blues Band.

Coffee house gives angelic music in Arlington Church

By Steve Engal

Beyond the facade of the Arlington Street Church, resides a quiet spirit. Every Friday and Saturday, a community of both the sanctuary and the city is transformed into the Arlington Coffee House. The house represents the antithesis of the usual commerical enterprises, with a sound coffee house, which can change up to five dollars over the course of the day. The Damaged Angel coffee house has no cover charge.

The Damaged Angel coffee house is a place only the coffee house, which is an afterthought. The Damaged Angel coffee house has no cover charge, which serve only exotic coffees, wines, and cheeses. The audience is somewhat more conserva tive than that to be found in other coffee houses in the city, many of the patrons are well beyond college age as the offerings of the coffee house.

Folk singing

It is in coffee houses, where the concept of traditional singing is provided by the singers. The ability of the entertainers last week varied from poorly sung and amateurish to well sung and talented and professional. Because the call to patrons is limited, the type of the entertainers must necessarily be non-professional. This does not imply that the performances were worse, however.

The coffee house may also be the home of other forms of entertain tment, including a serum of lines in the near future. The Damaged Angel coffee house has no pre tensions of being the Unicorn or the City, but it is in a coffee house is the traditional sense which can create an interesting evening in the drinking atmosphere.

If special note to many is the fact that this was an excellent place to begin a non-alcoholic career.

ANNOUNCED for the Damaged Angel will be the Friday after Jun e 1st, 1967, at 9:30 p.m. in the community hall.

The young musicians should take advantage of this chance to perform before a live audience in an informal atmosphere. The Damaged Angel will prove worthwhile to both performer and patron if they accept its limitations.

That's what General Electric is made of.

General Electric is made up of a lot more than just engineers - because it takes a lot more than engineers to tackle the problems we deal with. Like helping to untangle traffic jams in our cities, fighting air pollution, and finding new ways to provide power for underdeveloped nations. It takes sociologists, meteorologists, astronomers, writers - in fact, it takes people with just about every kind of training. But, more than any of this, it takes people with nerve, gumption, intellectual curiosity - people who care about what happens to the world.

So it's not only your major we're interested in. It's you. Why not see our interviewer when he comes to campus and find out whether you're the kind of person General Electric is made of.
