that graduate finals be given during the second week of the Examination Period.}

CAP slowed by complications of scheduling

Although last year's CAP got strong support in the executive, Professor Hartley admitted that there was opposition in the Faculty. He felt that this resulted primarily from the fact that "more things ones sees as a whole around MIT ... (passage the lag on the willingness to experiment.)"

I won't go into business when I graduate because:

- I'd lose my individuality.
- It's graduate school for me.
- My mother wants me to be a doctor.

Can't argue with c), but before you check a) or b) - pencil up! There have been some changes. Drastic changes in the business scene. But changes in the vax payol attitude regarding business ... especially on campus ... just haven't kept pace.

Take the belabored point that business turns most of the nation's successful firms didn't arrive by nepotism, by trusting an Orion board, or by agreeing with their bosses. Along the way, a well-modulated "No" was said. And backed up with the savvy and guts to-day's business demands.

In short, individuality is highly prized in much of the business world -- the successful much. Even when the business is big. Like Western Electric, the manufacturing and supply unit of the Bell System.

We provide communications equipment for our Bell System teammates, the Bell telephone companies. This takes a lot of thought, dedication,站着 our convictions, (and sometimes some mistakes ... we're human, even 160,000 of us).

Individuality pays off. Not only in raises, but in personal reward as well. Like an engi-
