Harrington added that the protest did not effect present policy with regard to off-campus recruiting. He stated that “any bona fide employee” would still be welcome. He added that, as far as he knew, Dow representatives would return in the Spring, as planned. Dunn Wadleigh added that the policy of free access to employment information would be continued in the soft room.

The full review of the Placement Office operation, which he says has never been reviewed, as a whole before.

SDS and one by Young Americans for Freedom. The general consensus seems to be that most of the participants were MIT related, except for some Wellesley girls (various-numbered as 4, 5, 10, or a buss-driver who were also present. Dow said that he felt the petition currently being circulated by SDS was more to stimulate discussion than influence the Institute. He added though that it was a first in a series of efforts to bring dissenting views to campus.

The walls are a combination of bright red orange, grey, white, and a mustard yellow. Tables are arranged in small "L"- configurations around the room. It has the combination of coffee room and kindergarten class at room.

The room is number 7410. Its design is the result of last Spring’s "Design Your Own Class-room Contest." Final planning and design of the room was done by Maria Kivistil ’68 while working this summer for the Planning Office.
