allowed tradition of "pinning" a girl is updated by Sprite bottle caps.

According to an independent survey (we took it ourselves), a startling new practice is becoming prevalent on some college campuses. Suddenly, fraternity men are no longer "pinning" lovely young things that catch their eye. Instead, they reach for a bottle of tart, tingling Sprite—and proceed to "cap" the object of their affections. Why has this come about? Perhaps because out of what happens when you go through the ceremony of opening a bottle of Sprite, (sigh! Homo! Hoozey! Tingling! Bubbles!) all of which makes for a much more romantic moment than to simply "pin" a girl. That, too, the intensity of two people engaged in the act of opening a bottle of Sprite in itself is at strong emotional involvement. (Tasting the tingling tartness of Sprite, that is.) The beauty of the idea is that if the course of true love does not run smooth, you don't have to go to the trouble of getting back your pin. You just buy another bottle of Sprite and proceed to "cap" the object of your affection again.

"A pain is..."

John S. H. Jones: "It is a pain in the ass."

Wullman: "Krugman is big—but I claim more ugliness per cubic inch, and that if you look at me you'll see more ugliness per cubic inch. I am the only candidate who had the courage to put his own picture on the petition although the picture did break the camera."

Write-in candidates Irving Sasso and Louise D. Hicks were not available for comment.

Do you buy a shirt or a label?

You buy both, if you're smart. Because a good label means a good shirt. A shirt that's styled to last. With no wrinkles, a perfect fit. And a wide enough selection of colors so you don't have to buy the same shade twice. This Arrow "Cum Laude" Oxford has all the things a good label means. Buttons-down roll collar with a soft flare. Tapered waist. Perma-Iron so it won't wrinkle. "Sanforized-Plus." And it comes in blue, pink, stripes, etc., etc., for $7.00. So, if you want a good shirt, look for a good label. And if you want the best label, buy a shirt made by Arrow.

1. What are you doing, Al?
2. What's this all about?
3. Really?
4. Sounds fascinating.
5. If you don't mind my saying so, I think you'll save time and effort by looking into the terrific opportunities at Equitable. The work is challenging. The pay good, and there are plenty of chances to move up fast.

UMOC candidates Peter Wulkan (left) and Alan Chapman seem to be engaged in a personal battle to see for themselves which (not who) is uglier.
