Astronomers, salesmen, designers, programmers, chemists, psychologists, writers, sociologists, economists, metallurgists, artists, accountants, physicists, mathematicians, etc., etc., etc.

That's what General Electric is made of.

General Electric is made up of a lot more than just engineers — because it takes a lot more than engineers to tackle the problems we deal with. It takes sociologists, meteorologists, astronomers, writers, in fact, it takes people with just about every kind of training. But, more than any of this, it takes people with nerve, gumption, intellectual curiosity — people who care about what happens to the world. It's not only your major we're interested in. It's you. Why not see our Interviewer when he comes to campus and find out whether you're the kind of person General Electric is made of.
