Letters to the Tech

To the Editor:

Regarding the article in the February 6th issue on the statement by the 400 French and Japanese undergradauates protesting the removal of the art students from the University...[text continues]

The Tech

Vol. LXCVIII, No. 2 Feb. 9, 1968

Letters to the Tech

To the Editor:

Today I observed a young female sitter placing newspapers. The Avatar, ran into the building and onto the stairs. I informed the man that he should be considered an trespasser. The situation is entirely legal. I am writing this letter to signify my belief that free speech is being used gratuitously in this instance. In my opinion, the police are taking advantage of the situation. The police are already making the situation worse by allowing the newspapers to be distributed.

Dean Roller

Dean of Students

The Thumb

Recently, the city of Boston has taken it upon itself to see that the menace of hitchhiking is eliminated from the streets forever. Thus it is, on a frosty morning, students engaged in the process of hitchhiking across the Harvard Bridge in order to get to their classes on time have found themselves short a few dollars as a result of a slip of paper given them by a man in a blue suit.

Actually, it is hardly to condemn the city for this. Hitchhiking is indeed against the law. Until recently, however, the regulations concerning this problem were not strict enough to say the least, and was virtually never applied to students crossing (or attempting to cross) the bridge.

Recently, however, the police department, but it will not make a bad traffic control. It is charged that hitchhikers interfere with the normal flow of traffic by standing far out from the curb, forcing cars to form long lines in order to avoid them. This is no doubt true, and a word to the wise on this subject should be sufficient. However, in the spirit of non-partisan criticism, we believe that the police should be given a bad traffic control.

The situation is open to all, and the word to the wise should be sufficient. However, in the spirit of non-partisan criticism, we believe that the police should be given a bad traffic control.

This seems like a reasonable solution to a problem which is minor, but which is also causing a "tax on those least able to bear it."

The Tech

Vol. LXCVIII, No. 2 Feb. 9, 1968

Letters to the Tech

To the Editor:

Regarding the article in the February 6th issue on the statement by the 400 French and Japanese undergradauates protesting the removal of the art students from the University...[text continues]

The Tech

Vol. LXCVIII, No. 2 Feb. 9, 1968

Letters to the Tech

To the Editor:

Today I observed a young female sitter placing newspapers. The Avatar, ran into the building and onto the stairs. I informed the man that he should be considered an trespasser. The situation is entirely legal. I am writing this letter to signify my belief that free speech is being used gratuituously in this instance. In my opinion, the police are already making the situation worse by allowing the newspapers to be distributed.

Dean Roller

Dean of Students

The Thumb

Recently, the city of Boston has taken it upon itself to see that the menace of hitchhiking is eliminated from the streets forever. Thus it is, on a frosty morning, students engaged in the process of hitchhiking across the Harvard Bridge in order to get to their classes on time have found themselves short a few dollars as a result of a slip of paper given them by a man in a blue suit.

Actually, it is hardly to condemn the city for this. Hitchhiking is indeed against the law. Until recently, however, the regulations concerning this problem were not strict enough to say the least, and was virtually never applied to students crossing (or attempting to cross) the bridge.

Recently, however, the police department, but it will not make a bad traffic control. It is charged that hitchhikers interfere with the normal flow of traffic by standing far out from the curb, forcing cars to form long lines in order to avoid them. This is no doubt true, and a word to the wise on this subject should be sufficient. However, in the spirit of non-partisan criticism, we believe that the police should be given a bad traffic control.

The situation is open to all, and the word to the wise should be sufficient. However, in the spirit of non-partisan criticism, we believe that the police should be given a bad traffic control.

This seems like a reasonable solution to a problem which is minor, but which is also causing a "tax on those least able to bear it."

The Tech