Institute receives ski lodge as gift from L. Rockefeller

By Darwin Agnew

MIT has acquired a ski-lodge in Southасте, Vermont as a gift from Lavoisere Rockefeller. The building, called Talbot House, is located three miles South of Woodstock, Vermont, atop Mount Tom and "a stone's throw from Suicide Six."

Hills 15 students

As presently set up, the house will hold 12 students and 1 faculty couple at a time. Its operation will be directed from Dean Hammen's office, on a first-come-first-serve basis.

The lodge will be available to any ancient group connected with the MIT community. The first group, some coeds from Massachusetts Institute of Technology, will arrive at the weekend of November 1. The house will be open thereafter, if all goes well.

The ski-lodge was给人一种 comfortable, lived-in atmosphere. It has a well-equipped kitchen, a comfortable sitting area, and a number of bedrooms. The facility is intended to be used as a training camp, and for small conferences (a la Down College). The house is set up in a rustic, natural setting.

Talbot House will be operated by a group of alums interested in the development of the facility. The group is looking for additional members and funding to support the lodge.

The ski-lodge is seen as an opportunity for MIT students and alumni to connect with each other and to strengthen the MIT community. It is hoped that the facility will be a valuable resource for future generations of MIT students.
