Bruce Enders

(Continued from Page 1)

It is high time that these improvements were made accessible to students. If the improvements are perceived as urgent, it must be demonstrated that this has not happened yet enough for the students to have experienced the benefits. A program would consist of an awareness campaign involving student leaders rather than viewing issues as being brought to the student body by administrative officials. This effort must be coordinated with that of the Student Association in setting up a permanent system. SCE should aid students to talk and stop. A complete feasibility study is best achieved by participation of students presenting both sides of various issues to the student body. A Campus Forum Committee would like to see a formal recognition of the student leaders who have never dealt with and within both government and faculty to demonstrate that these issues -- with the belief that MIT students are more relevant qualifications -- to the student body. Once student government becomes, rather than delegating or passing the major issues of concern, to the student body, they will indeed be seen as relevant. Meanwhile, the need for the students to be a political leader rather than a house of representatives is recognized in these major fields. I find it hard to accept that a person who has never been within the academic community and on the belief that MIT students have more to offer than their student leader than more of the same. I offer myself as the best candidate for the post of Undergraduate Association President.

35 run for office

UNDERGRADUATE ASSOCIATION PRESIDENT
Bruce A. Enders

Maria Kivislid

3.

END SEYKOTA

(Continued from Page 1)

feedback on projects, he says. He would also like to see formal reports presented to the sub-committee by the sub-committee chairman. He thinks that the reports of the project chairman and sub-committee heads, the student leaders will learn about people who are doing good work within the various groups. More students would gain visibility in this way. Also, Seykota says that at the present time, there is no adequate mechanism for the average student to make his ideas and opinions known.

Jim Smith

(Continued from Page 1)

I do not want to waste time with organizational changes. Any executive committees I establish will not have specific representatives from the various Student Association committees, but will be a work group made up of people I work with and who understand the problems and objectives students are working for. I will work for a student government reflecting the needs and status of all the students, in close contact with the student body in a way that will be fruitful and interesting for them.

Ed Seykota

(Continued from Page 1)

project chairmen and sub-committee heads, the student leaders will learn about people who are doing good work within the various groups. More students would gain visibility in this way. Also, Seykota says that at the present time, there is no adequate mechanism for the average student to make his ideas and opinions known.

35 run for office

UNDERGRADUATE ASSOCIATION PRESIDENT
Bruce A. Enders

Maria Kivislid

3.

END SEYKOTA

(Continued from Page 1)

feedback on projects, he says. He would also like to see formal reports presented to the sub-committee by the sub-committee chairman. He thinks that the reports of the project chairman and sub-committee heads, the student leaders will learn about people who are doing good work within the various groups. More students would gain visibility in this way. Also, Seykota says that at the present time, there is no adequate mechanism for the average student to make his ideas and opinions known.

Jim Smith

(Continued from Page 1)

I do not want to waste time with organizational changes. Any executive committees I establish will not have specific representatives from the various Student Association committees, but will be a work group made up of people I work with and who understand the problems and objectives students are working for. I will work for a student government reflecting the needs and status of all the students, in close contact with the student body in a way that will be fruitful and interesting for them.

Ed Seykota

(Continued from Page 1)

feedback on projects, he says. He would also like to see formal reports presented to the sub-committee by the sub-committee chairman. He thinks that the reports of the project chairman and sub-committee heads, the student leaders will learn about people who are doing good work within the various groups. More students would gain visibility in this way. Also, Seykota says that at the present time, there is no adequate mechanism for the average student to make his ideas and opinions known.

Jim Smith

(Continued from Page 1)

I do not want to waste time with organizational changes. Any executive committees I establish will not have specific representatives from the various Student Association committees, but will be a work group made up of people I work with and who understand the problems and objectives students are working for. I will work for a student government reflecting the needs and status of all the students, in close contact with the student body in a way that will be fruitful and interesting for them.