$200 prizes offered

YAF holds tactical weapons seminar

The Young Americans for Freedom held a seminar in conjunction with their Tactical Weapons Design Competition Thursday in the Bush room. About 80 people attended the meeting which featured representatives from the U.S. Army, MacLean, Navy, and even the South Vietnamese Navy. The seminar focused on the problem that war forces have had in Vietnam and possible technical solution of those problems.

Lee Grubic, who moderated the meeting, announced that Norris Industries has offered $200 for the competition. This is no way compromising an entrant’s proprietary rights to his design, because the $200 for prize is no longer necessary.

Capt. David B. Smith of the U.S. Army gave a short talk and then the meeting was thrown open to questions from the floor. An important question was asked about the weapons competition can even the South Vietnamese Army give a short talk and then the meeting was thrown open to questions from the floor. An important question was asked about the weapons competition can even the South Vietnamese Army give a short talk and then the meeting was thrown open to questions from the floor. An important question was asked about the weapons competition can even the South Vietnamese Army give a short talk and then the meeting was thrown open to questions from the floor. An important question was asked about the weapons competition can even the South Vietnamese Army give a short talk and then the meeting was thrown open to questions from the floor. An important question was asked about the weapons competition can even the South Vietnamese Army give a short talk and then the meeting was thrown open to questions from the floor. An important question was asked about the weapons competition can even the South Vietnamese Army give a short talk and then the meeting was thrown open to questions from the floor. An important question was asked about the weapons competition can even the South Vietnamese Army give a short talk and then the meeting was thrown open to questions from the floor. An important question was asked about the weapons competition can even the South Vietnamese Army give a short talk and then the meeting was thrown open to questions from the floor. An important question was asked about the weapons competition can even the South Vietnamese Army give a short talk and then the meeting was thrown open to questions from the floor. An important question was asked about the weapons competition can even the South Vietnamese Army give a short talk and then the meeting was thrown open to questions from the floor. An important question was asked about the weapons competition can even the South Vietnamese Army give a short talk and then the meeting was thrown open to questions from the floor. An important question was asked about the weapons competition can even the South Vietnamese Army give a short talk and then the meeting was thrown open to questions from the floor.