A blindfold test for beer.

If anybody ever says you can't pick Budweiser with your eyes shut, you can call his bluff.

First, have somebody pour several brands of beer into glasses. Now stick your nose close to the foam of each glass and take a sniff. Notice a difference? The one with the clean, fresh aroma is Budweiser.

Now taste. This gets a bit tricky. But the one beer that tastes like beer without any one flavor jumping out at you (like hops, or an extra sweetness, or sometimes a sour or sharp taste) is Budweiser. That's because Budweiser is mellowed—by our Beechwood Ageing. We want you to taste the beer, not the recipe. If anybody pulls a beer-tasting test on you, now you know how to win. Just follow your nose.

Carnival to feature Screw

By Larry Schmutz

Tomorrow AFO will hold its annual Spring Carnival from 7 to 10 pm in Rockwell Oaks. Included this year are over thirty booths, enormous quantities of electrocuted hot dogs and other refreshments (at a price), and the climax of the Second Annual Screw Carnival Contest. Carnival visitors will be able to witness an electronically-monitored seat of will power at a novel twist of the old kissing booth. The Sports Car Club will feature a lottery in which contestants can win a free day in a Shelby GT 350, or a Corvette or Mustang if under 25.

If you happen to have slightly different automotive interests, you can take a hand in demolishing a Corvair. Or for more violence, various campus personalities will be targets for an old-fashioned diaper throwing. And for a pure test of female endurance, there will be a giant Submarine Net Ring Toss.

At 11:30 the major Carnival awards will be presented. Among these will be a $20 trophy for the best booth, and, of course, the Big Screw. Tickets for most events will be sold at the price of ten for a dollar. For each ten tickets sold, the buyer will receive a ball for use in the Big Screw voting. This year's finalists are: alphabetically: Associate Professor David Rosel, II; Professor Kenneth Radleigh, II; Associate Professor Bruce Wedlock, VI; and a fifth contestant to be announced at evening.

Collection of draft cards highlights demonstration

Draft cards Following these addresses, the rally was highlighted by the collecting of draft cards from many of those assembled. 196 people slowly approached the podium and handed in their draft cards to representatives of the peace movement, including several university professors and members of the clergy. Among those accepting registration cards were Professor Chomsky and MIT Religious Counselor Raverand Robert Holtzapple.

The rally concluded soon thereafter. Many regarded the rally as a grandioso "show" above all, however, the tremendous attendance attest to the success of the Resistance in involving the Boston college community in the problem of bringing an immediate and lasting peace to the United States.
