To the Editor:
After having viewed the newly-painted walls of the basement of Building #7, I find myself pondering the possible decay of artistic scope and taste in decorating at MIT.
Surely these disharmonious, seemingly concept lacking particles are not meant to be re-representative of good, original modern art. Pop-, Op-, or otherwise.
Since these colors blantly and semi-permanently overspread the walls in this section of the Institute, there must be some meaning behind these colors. In the confines of that small area the purpose cannot be to relax the mind and/or body, to prepare one for that margin coffee, sandwich, or ice cream. Discouraging vibrance is never conducive to relaxation.
When I step from the elevator, I am forced to absorb the visual concession of an achromatop-
