(Continued from page 1) fixation by his Board in Buffalo, New York. Maurice Zigmond, a rabbi who had received citations from Presidents Truman and Roosevelt, approved of his son's action as the only moral alternative. Rabbi Herman Pollack, MIT Religious Counselor, also reported that a resolution presented to the Massachusetts Board of Rabbis was adopted condemning "the extra-legal use of the draft to silence opposition to the Vietnam War."

MIT support
Considerable support for Zigmond has come from the MIT faculty. Prof. Sylvan Brumberger (XXI) has assumed leadership of an ad hoc committee started to collect funds for MIT draft resisters. In addition, approximately 30% of the MIT faculty has now signed a petition in support of Zigmond's action. The petition reads in part: "...Anon the part of Dr. Zigmond's local draft board in a clear case of punitive reclassification, resulting from his protest of the war. This reclassification is unconstitutional in one of two respects. Either Dr. Zigmond has committed a crime in turning in his draft or not. In the event he has not, this order denies him the right to free speech. In the event that he has, his induction order is a clear case of punitive reclassification by his Board in Buffalo, New York."

A similar petition has been circulated among students, charging that "...the Selective Service System has flagrantly disregarded Constitutional guarantees and is acting as the prosecution, the judge, the jury, and the executioner. As students in the MIT Community, we cannot remain silent. We see this attack on Mr. Zigmond as an attack on us all."

A rally is being held in his support at 10 a.m. today at the Student Center.

The trick to a TWA 50/50 Club Card is knowing when to play it. For instance some holidays are out...you have to forget 50/50 and make reservations like regular old people. But any time, everyone under twenty-two, can split the 50/50 and know when to play it. For instance some

And you can use the card on a whole bunch of other airlines too. If you want to be clever, fly late at night to avoid the crowds.
