'Charge' well done lacks only coherence

By Robert Furrer

Saying anything about the evils of war in a historical film is a tricky point; it must work with ideas, but they may be expressed only within the parameters of historical action. Thus credibility is to be retained. These ideas must be portrayed by a certain amount of evocative, if anyone is to be convinced; but their general applicability must still be made clear, for in the end they will be valid for no one can ignore the story's main characters. And, if such a balance is maintained, one must be well presented and subtly supported, so that by the end they can be recognizable conclusion.

The CPO

Outershirt

The CPO, a bit arbitrary, since it is hardly the only film of its genre; but it is well photographed and well presented, and then dropped. As a result, one never feels the overall effect of the many despicable conditions portrayed; the ending might have much greater effect if it brought together all the ideas in the film, in stead of just extending a few of them.

If you're the kind of engineer who can't stand the thought of sitting at the same desk in the same office day after day, then you're the kind of engineer we want to talk to.

We want to talk to you about a career in technical marketing.

Engineers in this field spend most of their time out in the field; contacting and selling the finished products of General Electric to customers. Selling GE products and systems. Solving other people's problems. To do all that, you have to understand a lot more than engineering. You have to understand people and how to communicate with them. And that can be one of the hardest jobs there is.

If you'd like to know more about a career in technical marketing, plan to talk to our representative when he comes to campus. He can tell you how you can get away from it all and, at the same time, get ahead.
