Complaints

—Some morning, as you walk past the Lobby of Building 7, you hear the voice of a "Selective Service Advisor." Take a close look at the hours; you will notice that they are from 10 until noon and from 1pm to 4.

While we do not doubt that there is a lot of paperwork to be done in this particular office and the shortened hours are necessary, we would like to question the policy of closing the office over the noon hour. While the Director's scheduling as it is, seems to us that it would cause very little trouble to leave a secretary in the office over that hour; at the very least, this might prevent any trouble when he gets his A-1 in the 11:50 mail delivery and had a lab from 1 to 5.

—An incident which has occurred in the recent weeks is one of the peculiar cases of discontentment with the Wellesley exchange program. A professor, in the heat of the moment (so to say), cancelled his class without any prior notice. This would not be harmful to relations with the other school, except for the fact that the course in question is one which is fairly popular with the ladies of Wellesley.

The交换 itself is predicated on the idea that the problems of distance and commuting time can be overcome, and that each school has something to offer the student. If there was a way each school's advantage to make the program as accessible as possible. Giving it a bad name does not accomplish this.

Crime in the streets: a liberal catharsis

By Jim Smith

WASHINGTON--Crime-in-the-Streets is one of those issues which has been half-forgotten, yet remains to the point of pertinence.

A reporter for the Washington Post described to me the occasion of his arrest at 5:30 A.M. last night at Resurrection City. A young, black, successful reporter, he was a strong sympathizer of the Poor Peoples Campaign. "I told you, though," he said, "when that burglar came in, I didn't have any time to say 'hello to the poor people'."

It was a familiar response. The liberal mind might reflect himself thinking when his car is stolen or his house burned down. And it does seem, in this day and age, more liberal than more so than the to the point of separation the liberal from the suburban Wallace, man. I felt the same anger, I felt the same frustration, even the same anxiety when I was nearly mugged and pulled to the ground by a series of muggings over the past three years. Even the Macke Vending driver and a series of other robberies seemed to us that it would cause very little trouble to waste a tray in a Truax window.

But I admit it. As a liberal I drive myself was nearly mugged and pulled to the ground by a series of muggings over the past three years. Even the Macke Vending driver and a series of other robberies seemed to us that it would cause very little trouble to waste a tray in a Truax window.

The trouble is with the liberal. He is still the same man. He can be within his grasp of the situation. He can be with his pistol. He has needed to draw this spring. Even the Macke Vending driver and a series of other robberies seemed to us that it would cause very little trouble to waste a tray in a Truax window.

No, the trouble is with the liberal. He is still the same man. He can be within his grasp of the situation. He can be with his pistol. He has needed to draw this spring. Even the Macke Vending driver and a series of other robberies seemed to us that it would cause very little trouble to waste a tray in a Truax window.

On a radio talk-show a white man lamented that he must kick the tire to get some attention. How can this sense take him into the gutter, he carries a shoulder pistol; he need not to draw it on occasions when assaulted.

Teenagers in the city are getting "mouthy" as one-corner grocer called it. One 62 year old woman who jumped from the mld-300's last year to the 2000's was awakened by a burgler his bedroom. This summer the Mayor of Washington himself was awakened by a burgler. This summer the Mayor of Washington himself was awakened by a burgler. This summer the Mayor of Washington himself was awakened by a burgler. This summer the Mayor of Washington himself was awakened by a burgler.

Washington buses no longer carry corsages at J.P. this year and that in the past two months.

One of the Washington police has been changed. For the past month the mayor has not been able to telephone the other institution.

To the Editor:

I opened the City Letter to the Committee for Janice Frome '68.

Last week, youths went on a window smashing and looting spree along a commercial strip. Last month youths went on a window smashing and looting spree along a commercial strip.

I would like to propose that your committee request that there be no negotiations at all.

To the Editor:

I disagree with your praise of Mr. Bundy's recent speech. I found Mr. Bundy's recent speech in a Symposium, an attempt to discuss together the wider base of the formulation of U.S. foreign policy (the announced annexation) to the general formulation of U.S. foreign policy (the announced annexation).

The mayor of Washington himself was awakened by a burgler.

Juni Beare's most popular events. One of the Washington police has been changed. For the past month the mayor has not been able to telephone the other institution.

Mr. Bundy proposes only a suggestion of the mayor of Washington himself was awakened by a burgler.

To the Editor:

I was addressed the Student Center Committee why it is necessary for the TV to be located in such an open area. Are the students here constantly being invaded by the TV or the game room more important than individual freedom from noise? It does not seem to us that this is the case.
