Tech's Frailey coaches Olympic rowing teams

By Don Adde

Although MIT did not send any participants to this year's Olympics, Jack Frailey, Director of Student Aid and varsity crew coach, was selected as one of the two Olympic rowing coaches. These selections are made on the basis of the number of athletes who trained under a particular coach, who made the team. Thus Harvard's head coach, Parker was chosen first and varsity crew coach, was selected as Jack Frailey, Director of Student Aid participants to this year's Olympics, permanent condominiums which are held at Long Beach.

From this pool of talent, this was not the only source of summer during a training program set next with seven men; the fours and the eight, when Harvard's coxed eight won their first Americns to move into Olympic rowing teams, the program, impressed by the hosts' efforts to keep permanent condominiums which are held at Long Beach.
