The Gilbert and Sullivan Society's fall production, "H.M.S. Pinafore," impressed as it easily and delightfully filled the house with both scenes and music. It is one of the most complete and entertaining productions ever given, and its success is well-deserved.

The story is set in a small English village of the 19th century, and it is about the love affair between two young people, a sailor and a girl from the village. The girl's father, who is the village doctor, is against the match because he believes the sailor is not suitable for his daughter. However, the sailor proves his love for the girl by saving her father from a dangerous situation.

The production was directed by Professor A. R. Gurney, who is known for his expertise in stage management. The production was under his direction, and he did an excellent job of bringing the story to life on stage.

The cast was excellent, with the lead roles played by Ron S. and Diahann Carroll. Ron S. was superb as the Captain, and Diahann Carroll was wonderful as the Female Voice. The supporting cast was also excellent, with each actor bringing their own unique style to the production.

The music was enveloping, with the Gilbert and Sullivan songs being sung with great passion and enthusiasm. The production was under the supervision of Ronald Sack's Little Big Band, which added a wonderful touch to the proceedings.

The set design was also excellent, with the village being brought to life on stage. The costumes were also well done, with each actor wearing the appropriate attire for their character.

In conclusion, "H.M.S. Pinafore" is a fine production that should not be missed. It is a joy to watch and enjoy, and it is sure to please both Gilbert and Sullivan fans and new audiences alike.
