Letters to The Tech

to work within the established system. He then mentioned the Friday forum and closed meetings.

Administration response
Following the informal meeting, Dean Kenneth Wadleigh told The Tech that he objected to the way in which the leaders of the student group had not communicated to the faculty either their desire to attend the meeting or their intention to leave if asked. The faculty must have had informal knowledge of the students' intentions of attending the meeting, however, because the Assistant Secretary of the Faculty handed a printed statement of faculty rules concerning attendance at faculty meetings to each student in the room.

Dean Wadleigh also stressed that President Johnson's comment concerning disobeying a law was not in the nature of a threat.

Students' statement
A spokesperson for the student group issued the following statement of their position after leaving the faculty meeting:

"To clarify our position with regard to the attendance of faculty meetings, we had no intention of disrupting or in any way interfering with the meeting. No confrontation was desired or for that matter expected. We simply felt that students, instructors, and others concerned with matters under faculty consideration have a clear right to observe such faculty meetings and to provide their viewpoints in matters relevant to them.

"We ask for instance, of Professor Rosenblith, what has become of the eight pass-petitions submitted to him by classes months ago.

"Faculty need not fear, we hope, the prospect of their viewpoints and actions being visible to the entire MIT community."

Outlook
Prior to the meeting the possibility that a faculty member might move to admit students was discussed.

An administration source expressed the opinion that such a motion would be followed by a motion to adjourn which would be carried.

Concerning the possibility of action on this matter by the faculty, Dean Wadleigh said that the ad hoc committee of chairs of faculty committees had been selected to consider the outcome of the forum held by the faculty concerning faculty meetings and the TANG student government proposal and report at the next faculty meeting.
