and be a non-profit organization established in order to provide funding for community projects such as black jacks and cooperatives. Financial support for the foundation would be obtained primarily from donations by the Kennedy School of Government, perhaps to be named Planning and Policy Analysis.

The committee rejected the idea of a PhD in Urban Studies, and in order to obtain readmission large size that the Carnegie Commission on Higher Education had recommended for the Kennedy School of Government, perhaps to be named Planning and Policy Analysis.

The report stated that the policy of the university should not be "to serve as a government, or a consulting firm, or as a policy, or a pressure group, or a family, or a kind of secularized church; it is to serve as a center of learning and free inquiry."

Some of the proposals that the committee had put forth have already been put into action. The Harvard Corporation has approved a job training program which will be a part of the students' work in departments and the Harvard Planning Office has assigned a man to work with groups such as the Riverside Neighborhood Association.

Belaunde discusses plans for development of Peru that the 500 million dollars of United States private investment has yielded a 23% profit annually, and that aid from the United States government is usually in the form of interest loans, often short term. Belaunde criticized the fact that foreign capital, both private and from governments, was desperately needed. When asked about the profits made in Latin America which go back to the United States, he stated that "Nationalization against foreign capital, in my opinion, is a mistake."

His primary concern in the development of Peru, and the United States is in the best position to help. The former President's comments about the Peace Corps were especially critical. He stated that the Peace Corps, he said, should be regarded not as an aid but as a part of American education. The training of a young group aware of the problems of underdeveloped nations can only be in America's best interests. Reiterating the success of North American capital invested abroad, he explained that he saw one advantage in the policy of making it difficult for the foreigner to help out as well as to "transact business of mutual interest."

He decided Johnson's failure to mention Latin America in his State of the Union address, and blamed the current state of the Alliance for Progress on the Kennedy administration.

Belaunde did not appear to be a man caused from power. He spoke with the poise of a man used to power, and he appeared confident that he would return to Peru. Belaunde's main proposal for the future of Peru is the development of the interior, for both economic and nationalistic reasons. Chastened, the Andean Highlands are the most favorable lands for agriculture in Peru. He envisioned a "courage to take possession of our own land and a fulfillment of national aspirations."

The Editor:

We wish to make clear before the petty votes and before any action has occurred what the framework of the meeting is and will be.

What is at issue here is not anything about disruptions, or any form of instruction. This must be clear to all. But at issue is the right of all students to attend and participate on a voluntary basis at the meetings where the policy of the faculty is decided and represented.

We reject the notion that a select group of faculty, students, or any privileges constitutes a sufficient framework of the meeting. Reasons: our student government representatives and student members of faculty committees are being challenged to the validity and function of their "representation" of student opinion. We reject the notion of any student action to be solely with the possession of the faculty and only if he has something considered important by the faculty to present and discuss.

Reasons to anticipate natural disagreement between students and the faculty as to what issues are "important" or salient and would not leave it up to the faculty to decide. That is not our interest to pro-

The issue, we repeat, is that the RIGHT OF ALL STUDENTS TO ATTEND AND PARTICIPATE ON RIGHT OF ALL STUDENTS.

In the event of faculty resistance to this obvious need for change, we may decide to attend faculty meetings any-

IT MUST BE CLEAR THAT THIS IS NOT DISRUPTION BUT THE EXERCISE OF OUR LEGITIMATE RIGHT.

IT MUST NOT BE CLOUDED OR TWISTED INTO PERPETRATING TIES AS DISRUPTION.

IT IS NOT!

If the CCC proposal is passed, we will take measures to demonstrate the immensity of this compromise.

We hope that this issue will be resolved simply and without fuss by the faculty officially recognizing this right.

Frosh teams go one for three

Frosh teams would be set at a meeting of the Radcliffe Judicial Board Wednesday evening. Four graduate students who took part in the demonstration were also given "suspended suspensions" by the Graduate School Administrative Board.

Before the faculty meeting, 100 graduate students had signed pledges to go on strike if any students were suspended. When word of the Administrative Board's decision leaked out, rumors of strikes and building takeovers swept the campus, although the unrest died down with the announcement of the faculty's decision.

Twenty-two Radcliffe students also signed pledge cards in the Dec. 15 meeting. Their punishment was set at a meeting of the Radcliffe Judicial Board Wednesday evening. Four Radcliffe graduate students who took part in the demonstration were also given "suspended suspensions" by the Graduate School Administrative Board.

The tech swimmers beat Bowdoin 45-46, but two other frosh teams lost to their opponents this week. The cages lost to Hinscoon Air Force Base 91-47, and the wrestlers lost to Springfield College 35-5.

Co-captain Pete Sauders stood out in the swimming meet by winning three events, the 50 and 100 yard freestyle, and the 200 yard butterfly. Furthermore, his time for the 50-yard backstroke was a new MIT record. Co-captain Pete Hadley also had a good day. He won the 100-yard freestyle and took second in the 700-yard event. Ken Barrett also placed twice: he won the 200-yard medley, and was runner-up in the 200-yard breaststroke. And Jim Knauss was runner-up in the diving. Charles Grosen added a third for the engineers in diving.

Although it was an unscheduled game, the MIT frosh basketball team accepted a challenge from the Hinscoon AFB team. The two men team arrived at Rockwell Cap with four scored lieutenants, and one player, Jack Thomas who had played on a college team before joining the Air Force.

The frosh teams were victorious by a very strong Springfield College team, 95-53.Monroe Robinson, wreslting at 167 lbs was the only engineer able to win his match. He earned three points for his team with an impressive 13-4 victory. Paul Mitchell scored the other two points for MIT by wrestling his 160 lb opponent to a 5-2 tie. However, none of the other Tech wrestlers were able to do as well.

At 135 lbs, Paul Rockhold lost 13-1.istes Sheld, at 123 lbs lost 6-2. Sam Turner lost his first game at 130, but finally succumbed 6-4. The next two matches, at 117 and 145, were not even close. Mark Nuckolls lost 1st 13-0 and Bill Gould lost 18-4.
