Harold Fedewor

In the coming year student govern- ment will need to make some major choices concerning its agenda. The first will be to implement the new faculty senate that was chosen in the referendum. It will be sufficiently to modify set student government under the Integrated System. The very process of setting up a new faculty bureau would be a good test of the student government's ability to tailor its agenda to the needs of the student body. The second problem is how to get rid of the increasing willingness of the faculty and administra- tion to involve students in the policy making process. In the past we have seen some students on several con- ventional issues where there were no means at all for student input. I would like to see this procedural change, but I would also like to see a provision for at least some student input to the various meetings of the Academic Council, which is the top policy making group at the Institute. The main choice facing the students will be to determine the next president of the University. The Institute Committee was allowed to die this year by a lack of leadership on the part of the student government. It is essential that the student government be able to carry on the function of the Institute Committee and take the initiative in guiding student government where it should go so that the student government does not die before it has a chance to live. Student government would be better advised to increase its policy making ability, rather, than wait for the administration to set the agenda. The student government with a budget of about $100,000. One of the first things that should be done is to take a look at the priorities among the various allocates. For several years, I hope to be working to implement the above goals and to continue students in that fact student government is not important to their lives, and can influence their lives profoundly.

Dick Evans

As a write-in candidate, I would like to apologize for not deciding to run for the Student government in the last Student Senate election. I believe that the University's student government is not capable of handling the task it has been given. It is only by making the students aware of what decisions are being made, and by whom, and in the sense that there are people open to student help in making these decisions.

What does this entail? I feel that a strong Public Relations Committee and/or Secretariat and/or The Tech are needed. It is only by making decisions, and by whom, and in the sense that there are people open to student help in making these decisions.

I also believe that it is necessary to have student representatives on all faculty and administrative committees which are responsible for making decisions having an effect on students. If I do not feel that students should vote- vetting power, I only feel that the voice in our affairs that is being respected.

In conjunction with the student representatives, I also feel that it is necessary to have the student government and student groups discussing student issues and handling student problems. As far as student government is concerned, I find that much of the student government is representative, I believe that this is the real job of the student government.

Edward Barsa

The time has come for a change. Student government at MIT is finally doing the long-awaited change in its structure. But this should not be the sole source of modification. Far too often candidates for the office of UAP have been the stereotypical student politician who claims to have a complete overview of the Institute and his own solution to virtually every problem. Now that the decision has been made to start afresh, it would be best to start with the character of the position of UAP. With this in mind, we set out in search of a new type of student leader, an average student. We sought someone who was personable and study-abroad, and did not belong to the current leadership. In so doing, we found our man. Mike Albert.

Having run for political office, Edwards Ed fry had not been spoiled by a disharmonious desire for power. At least some would like to see an effective student government striving to meet the needs of its undergraduate population. Ed does not feel that the cumbersome bureaucracy of student government is the only solution to the problem. He abhors the neck of many a former UAP who would remain the regrettable necessity of the student government. It is our desire to recreate this office in the form of an executive manager of student government, a bro- ken record. It is hard to find a plan that fits the American society.

It is with this thought that we would like to propose a new method of measurement to the next governmental system at MIT. We believe that the UAP is a cabinet position. The cabinet would be easily accessible to anyone and the ever- present problem of communication would be eliminated. These individuals would also constitute a group of individuals chosen at his discretion. It is our desire to recreate this office in the form of an executive manager of student government, a broken record. It is hard to find a plan that fits. We have had the burden of endless trivia which was the character of the position of UAP. We sought someone who was personable and study-abroad, and did not belong to the current leadership. In so doing, we found our man. Mike Albert.

Mike Albert

1. As an early war related research on MIT and affiliated institutions and the decolonization of cooperative research programs with other corpora- tions, as outlined by SACC 1, the demands of the Black Student Union, including increased admission and scholarships for Blacks, and the imple- mentation of a program similar to that practiced by the Blacks but focused around the grievances of other exploited groups. One aspect of such an approach would be a recruitment program in Camp- bell, South Boston, and the North End.

2. My views on academic reform are included in the report of the Ad Hoc Committee on Campus, which I have a large part of the writing.

The housing crisis - high rents, and poor and inefficient housing for the residents of Cambridge - is in part caused by the refusal of MIT and Harvard to build sufficient housing for their students. A number of The Tech editors have made this point clear.

---

Paxton Quigley

He learned and learned and learned — Too much learning isn’t good for a young man. American International College

Christopher Jones

San Diego style · Mexican Food · 25 Market Street · Northampton, Mass. 01060 586-6634

Beef Tacos - Tomates Enchiladas - Refried Beans Chile - Mexican Rice GUACAMOLE SALAD OPEN 5:30 pm

---

The Alamo

San Antonio style · Mexican Food · 25 Market Street · Northampton, Mass. 01060 586-6634

Beef Tacos - Tomates Enchiladas - Refried Beans Chile - Mexican Rice GUACAMOLE SALAD OPEN 5:30 pm