with the Reserve Officer's Training Corps

ROTC course as a pre-requisite for his graduation, the institute, for that acknowledged reason, will not extend a contract, if it is of some interest to note that the University of Michigan recently refused to graduate one of its own students for failing to complete his ROTC training.

The student will be relieved of his duty, if he enrolls at the University of Michigan, provided that he will satisfy all University regulations, as to attendance and progress, and that he will return to the ROTC at the end of the academic year. The student will not be affected by this decision, if he fails to make satisfactory progress, or if he is dismissed from the University.

No contract will be entered into for any student who fails to satisfy the requirements of the University, or who fails to make satisfactory progress.

A report on this hearing and on the investigation officer of the ROTC at the University will be given a hearing on his request by the Secretary of the Army.

The withdrawal of academic credit will not affect the punitive clauses of the ROTC regulations, and the removal of ROTC students from the Reserve Officer's Training Corps does not relieve MIT of its contractual obligations, if any, regarding the ROTC and shall not sign immediately all contracts and agreements regarding the ROTC and shall not sign any new contracts or make any agreements, either formal or informal, for the training of our students on this campus in any form whatsoever.

The Institute will now make a special effort to oppose the ROTC, and it is the Institute's policy to eliminate the ROTC from MIT. The student who wishes to continue his military training, so long as it is not conducted as part of the University training, may have his contract cancelled in any form whatsoever.

The ROTC will not be located on this campus, but the student who wishes to continue his training, so long as it is not conducted as part of the University training, may have his contract cancelled.

The ROTC will not be located on this campus, but the student who wishes to continue his training, so long as it is not conducted as part of the University training, may have his contract cancelled.