One way to increase communication among fraternity members is to allow each house to operate a few websites that chronicle the activities in which they are participating. With this in mind, I have chosen a few areas that I feel will be of interest to other houses. Hopefully this will provide some useful hints and ideas that may readily accept suggestions and discussion on any of them.

Recently there has been much criticism of fraternities and the fraternity system. In light of this, I think it is important to examine our fraternity and to question its goals. What are our goals? How are we to achieve them? What is the purpose of a fraternity? What is brotherhood? Just what is our definition of fraternity? For what are these goals best attained? In light of these considerations, I have chosen a few areas that I feel will be of interest to other houses.

We organized an Earth Day-II and urged every member to participate in all social activities for the alumni. There is also the never-to-be-repeated Lambda Chi Sigma Chi football game in the fall, and recently a sophomore-junior basketball game.

It should be clear that the observations contained here are personal and do not purport to represent the views of the members of the fraternity. We are, at present, examining the problems of some of our historical traditions. The utility of our national affiliation, required chapter meetings, the loyalty oath, budgeting, and Rush Week are being critically examined. One national fraternity seems to offer us at this present time a series of means and forms to improve our system. It has become more and more difficult to prove the goals of fraternity life. Educational learning is of course impossible without interaction with other members. We are also forced to hold the most cherished goals of the fraternity that are required to build good brotherhood.

Every man is traditionally able to thrive and to become a better man. He should be able to improve his life and to be successful. Every man has an opportunity to find a job that he is interested in. He is his own boss and he is able to choose his own path. This is the way an individual could find himself in the fraternity. The purpose of the fraternity is to build good brotherhood.

The IFC has announced the formation of a new committee to investigate and marijuana in fraternities, and the committee has outlined various programs under which it plans to work during the fall.

The subject of the present blackball system was discussed with a general consensus that further study is needed. The committee was also asked to continue an on going system of presenting in houses and alums buildings in houses in alums.

The committee is also working to bring fraternity members into the fraternity restrictions. On all these questions, the effect of the system has increased considerably.

Sigma Chi holds first annual Derby Day for Wellesley

Spectators and participants sported over Sonnencreme Green at Wellesley College at the first Sigma Chi Derby Day on April 30. Teams from each Wellesley dorm competed in a number of "Black events" in an attempt to garner a stereo system from TechHi for their dorm's living room.

The Day began with a parade through the Wellesley campus led by a group of men dressed in the modes of the 1970's. The Day continued with the running of the races. Each dorm was outfitted by each dorm as part of the competition. Once at the Green the outcasts were greeted by the members of each dorm. The members of each dorm were being greeted by the members of each dorm.

Fiji Island Party to occur May 10

This year's Fiji Island Party, to be held May 10, will have certain changes from the past. In fact, the most significant change will be an admission charge of $15 per couple to cover the cost of a $100 per couple donation to the national policy of free admission, although this is not expected to dampen enthusiasm.

The party, which is open to the whole MIT community, will be held at the Sigma Club-an unabashed dance hall owned by a group of alumni at the bike-in Flitett, Massachusetts. As in past years, the doors will be open to all. A dance hall attraction is the traditional Fiji punch, and we are strongly urged to bring their own hula hula costumes for their entertainment. Music will be provided by the Wrong Tracks, who specialize in soul music. A bus service is also being offered to transport guests to and from the dance.

Tickets for both the party and the buses may be purchased in blocks of ten for $100 per couple. Also, tickets and maps for driving will be available at the Fiji booth in the lobby of Building 10.
