And while you were on vacation....

Most students left the Institute for the summer, but a number of them went to Cambridge to participate in various festivals or to work in the学术 campus.

Significant events occurred in the Academic Council during the summer when the administration and the faculty argued over the responsibilities of MIT and the Academic Council. The Academic Council determined that the land would not be used for expansion of the academic campus (which would take the property off the tax rolls). Instead, tentative plans call for the site to be used for commercial development, which will include both industry and commercially financed housing.

The Planning Office is currently developing detailed plans for the site. A number of high-level meetings concerning the responsibilities of MIT and the Academic Council were held during the summer.

The purchase of this enormous property has raised serious questions concerning the future of the Institute. It was hoped that the land would be used for expansion of the academic campus, but the Academic Council determined that the land would not be used for this purpose.

End of loafed text.

Join The Tech
Get an education
Stop by our office, Room W20-483
any Sunday or Wednesday night

Cambridge Trust Company
Wants your account
It's that simple

FREE CHECKING ACCOUNTS ($100 minimum balance)
LONGER HOURS 8:00 am to 5:00 pm
Cambridge Trust Company
Located near the Ford Building (E-19)
326 Main Street
876-5500

The Tech Monday, September 22, 1969 Page 5